IN HUB MARKETS

Quotations on the Leading Products In Demand

Boston, March 24.-Butter has developed a firmer tone again, though trade is still rather quiet, with buyers only covering immediate wants. Choice fresh made, 28/a20c; northern creamery, 27628c; western, 261/6271/2c, dairy, 25/a26e.

Cheese is very firm, with the recent advance fully sustained. Liverpool continues to advance, and the situation is firm in all markets. York state, 13% 714%c; Vermont twins, 13@14c.

Eggs show a substantial decline for the week, and are now down to the usual spring basis. Choice nearby, 20 5221c; eastern, 196220c; western, 186

Beans are a little firmer in the country, though here the market is quier and barely steady on pea and medium. Carload lots, pea, $1.90@1.95; medium $2 20a2.25; yellow eyes, $2.40; red kidneys, $3/a3.50; California small white, $2.50/a2.55; jobbing prices, 10@15c higher.

Local dealers in fruits and vegetables continue to report a good business. The market is well stocked and prices generally are not quite so firm as they have been. The products of local hothouses are beginning to come in in larger quantities and receipts of southern green garden truck have increased.

Spinach, both hothouse and Norfolk, is much lower than it was a week ago and dandelions and beet greens have declined. Southern string beans have dropped under large offerings. Potatoes remain weak, with supplies still very much in excess of the demand Tomatoes are not plenty and are high. Cabbages are in good supply, but dull and only the best lots bring the top prices. Choice, sound onions are rather scarce and firm. Lettuce, celery and squashes are steady. Rhubarb and asparagus are easier, but cauliflowers have advanced.

OUR FARMERS.

MAKING MAPLE SYRUP.

The demand for a genuine No. 1 article of maple syrup is growing greater each year, and it will continue to grow in the future because the supply will grow smaller each year, caused by the decline of maple forests. The man who has a nice thrifty maple grove has something that will be the source of as much revenue for the time and money expended as anything upon the farm. provided the right methods are adopted and carried into execution.

The time is forever past when slipshod methods will go in making maple syrup. The man that will succeed in this line of farming must adopt upto-date methods, and above all else be strictly honest, always and under all circumstances furnishing exactly what he represents his goods to be.

The successful sugar maker will in the future have his own private customers and sell direct to them, and as maple syrup is a luxury insteadlof a necessity, skill must be used in making and putting it up because just the moment we make a filthy, dark-colored article and put it up in an unattractive manner, it ceases to be a luxury, and we are compelled to take the "down" price

Neatness, cleanliness and quickness of dispatch are rules that must be observed, and to carry them into execution we must have a good sugar house, a good supply of dry wood, a modern evaporator, vessels either of metal or wood; if wood, kept well painted inside and out; if metal, painted on the outside, and at all times the vessels, and in fact everything connected with the work, must be kept scrupulously clean by the frequent use of hot water.

People used to think that maple syrup to be pure must be dark in color and have a strong taste, but I am glad to say that this is far from true. I use every means possible to make it as light in color and mild in taste as it can be made, and it is within our power to control these things.

When sugar-making comes we have our work arranged so that we can vices at the new vestry of the Congregadevote our entire time to it, and tional church at Greensboro, Tuesday, whenever the sap begins to run we are ready to care for it; every hour we leave it exposed to the weather and elements we are adding to its color, and strongness to its flavor. We make it a rule to begin hauling and evaporating whenever the vessels contain from a quart to a half-gallen. We also aid in making it light in color by evaporating it as quickly as possible, and this part of the work I look after myself, setting the automatic feed so that it will keep the water in the evaporator just as shallow as is possible to keep it without burning.

By this method I am enabled to evaporate much more than if the water was kept deep in the pans, because the steam bubbles form at the bottom of the water and if it is too deep they burst before coming to the surface and the work is to do all over again, while on the other hand if it is shallow they come to the surface before bursting, the steam escapes, and the evaporating goes on very rapidly. We use a sacchrometer to test our syrup, and take it directly from the evaporator, weighing 11 pounds to the gallon, and filter it through felt or flannel to remove the silica; put it up in attractive packages and sell direct to the consumer. The only trouble is, we have not been able in the past to make enough to supply all our orders.-Cor. Ohio Woolley, was born in Cavendish Jan. 6, of the cow. Thus if a cow will give a milk product worth $50 she is worth $50. If she can show up $75, she is worth that sum. The rule, however, does not hold good as to cows which will only produce milk worth $20 per year. Such a beast is only worth just what the local butcher will give for her or what she will bring as a canner.

The fact has been demonstrated the past season that the use of well bred and pedigreed seed corn was wholly responsible for an increase of twenty bushels per acre in the yield of a field of corn, the test being made with scrub seed and pedigreed seed in the same field, with the crop receiving the same treatment and cultivation There is a fact here of the greatest importance to all growers of corn and one which can no longer be ignored.

When fifteen years of age she came with her parents to Lowell. Sne taught The yearly milk product of a cow school in both Lowell and Westfield. very closely approximates the value | Probably there are people in both towns Thomas P. Brown of Plymouth, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. N. H. Downs of clixir fame. The young couple took up their residence in Plymouth, where they lived eleven years, then they moved to Westfield, locating on the farm now owned by James Martin. About twenty years later they removed to Albany. During the past twenty-five years Mrs. Brown's home has been with her youngest daughter, Avis, who married George Andrews, and who now lives two mites from Island Pond in the border of Charleston. Of Mrs. Brown's eight children, four survive her. A little son three years old and an infant daughter died in Plymouth. Hiland died in Derry, N. H., in 1878, aged nineteen years. Maria, who married Osmer Farman, died in Lowell in 1879, aged twenty-five years. The four surviving children are Alice, wife of Simon Hitchcock of Troy, Isabel, wife of Willard Farman of this town, John A. Brown of Albany, and Avis, already mentioned. She is survived by a number of grand-Brown was an exceptionally active woman all her life. She retained her sight and hearing, possession of all her faculties and celerity of movements until the morning of the day of her death. For a year past rule, the saving of labor would be from $60 to her health had not been quite as good as formerly, though she continued to participate in and enjoy the activities of life. On the morning of Wednesday, March 8, she helped do the usual work, but about eight o'clock was taken ill with a pain in the abdomen. She grew worse rapidly and the physician summoned could do but little to alleviate her suffering. She died at 8:00 p. m. Her age was eighty-four years, two months and two days. Two months previous, when her brother James was buried, she told Hon. Porter H. Dale, who officiated at the funeral, that if he survived her she wished him to officiate at her funeral, and she wished sung the hymn, "All the Way My Savior Leads Me." Her wishes were carried out. She was an industrious, sociable, cheery lady with a hopeful temperament, a kind neighbor and sympathizing friend.

The following letter is said to have been received at the office of a certain state paper.

Dear:-I hereby offer my resignashun as a subscribber to your papier, it being a pamphlet of such small konsequence as not to benefit my family ed. Do any of you know how older by takin it. What you need in your shete is branes & someone to russell news and rite editorials on live topics. No menshun has been made in your shete of me butcherin a polen china pig weighin 369 pounds or the gaps in the chickens out this way. Yo ignore the fact that I bought a bran new bobsled and that I traded my blind mule and say nothing about Hi Simpkins jersey calf breakin his 2 frunt legs fallin down a well. 2 important chivrees have been utterly ignored by your shete, and a 3 column obitchury notice writ by me on the death of Grappa Henry was left out of shete to say nothin of a alfabethical poem beginning "A is for And and also for ark," writ by my darter. This is the reason your papier is so unpopular here, if you don't want edytorials from this place and ain't going to put no news in your shete, We don't want said shete.

P. S. -If print obitchury in your next shete i may sine again for your A Rare Plant.

A year or two ago there were among the boarders at a mountain summer hotel a celebrated botanist and a certain pretentious rich woman, who liked to make it appear to the guests that she was very well informed on all subjects. The rich woman affected to take an int :t in the researches of the botamst among the flora of the mountains.

"I suppose, Mr. Cavlix," said the lady, "you find almost all the mountain flowers around here?"

"I have found a great many, ma'am," said the botanist.

"Well, there's one kind of flower that I've read a great deal of as being always on the hills, and I've always wanted to see it. Perhaps you could pick me some."

"What is it?"

"The 'purple gloaming,' you know!"

A Success.

The head of a matrimonial combine glanced at a bill from his wife's dressmaker.

"When I proposed to you, less than two years ago," he said, "I was rather wild, and you said you considered it your duty to marry me for the purpose of making something of me, did you not?"

"Yes, John," answered the wife. "Well," he continued, "your efforts have not been in vain. You have succeeded." "I'm so glad," she said. "What have I made of you, dear?"

Once more he glanced at the bill. "A pauper," he replied, with a deep sigh.

Family Secrets Given Away.

In the infant class one Sunday the lesson was about disobedience and its punishment. "Little children have to mind or they are not nice," said the teacher. "Older people have to obey laws or be punishpeople are punished?" Little Florence answered: "Oh, ves, I know! The husbands scold the wives, and the wives scold the husbands."

It Pays to Use Fertilizing Salt

G. W. Lovejoy of Hardwick, Vt., tells how he increased his crop of oats by the use of Salt. Read his letter: "One year ago I put 800 pounds of your Salt on two acres that the year before cut less than 300 pounds of have and sowed to peas and cats and raised 10 one-horse loads. I put 1200 pounds on three acres that had been plowed and cropped about 10 years and on that I had a heavy crop of oats, and this year I put on 1200 pounds more and had a heavy crop of oats. I used $5 worth of Salt this year and got a crop of cats worth $50. It pays to buy Fertilizing Salt." The Salt used was purchased of C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., who is selling his this year's product at the very low price of $3.50 per ton, f. o. b. cars at his station. Farmers who are obliged to purchase fertilizers can make no better investment than to buy a few tons of this Salt.
